

DENTURES

FULL DENTURES

Full dentures are similar to partial dentures in that they are prosthetic teeth and gums that is used to replace all your missing teeth. They are essentially a dental appliance with “false teeth” that is placed on top of your gums to replace either the whole upper or lower teeth and, in some cases, both.

OVERDENTURES

Overdentures are a newer alternative to dentures, combining traditional denture technology with modern advancements in dental implants.

With the use of 2- 4 implants, an overdenture is able to sit securely in place on top of the implants to instantly increase retention, stability, and comfort. This is especially great for patients who have traditional dentures that tend to move or come out when eating or chewing due to lack of bone ridge to hold the denture in place.

Another benefit of overdentures compared to traditional dentures is the limited amount of bone loss where the implants are placed, making the procedure more successful in the long run and helping to preserve facial structural integrity. Overdenture as compared to traditional denture is a more effective, satisfying and longer lasting prosthesis.
